

2024 Teaching Kitchen Symposium

Call for Session & Speaker Ideas

Share your session ideas and/or nominate speakers to help shape the program for the inaugural Teaching Kitchen Symposium!

The Teaching Kitchen Collaborative (TKC) team is working with the Symposium Planning Committee (an esteemed group of invited leaders in the field) to curate the Symposium program schedule and to provide high quality learning opportunities in compliance with continuing education requirements. With an anticipated audience of 350-400 interdisciplinary professionals, the Symposium presents an unparalleled opportunity to showcase diverse perspectives and innovative approaches to advancing the impact of teaching kitchen programs within the broader Food Is Medicine movement.

We hope to showcase many TKC members, as well as several external guest speakers, and we invite you to support our efforts to spotlight talented speakers, fresh voices, and groundbreaking ideas that will inspire and equip attendees for teaching kitchen triumphs!

As a nonprofit organization, we are pleased to offer selected speakers a complimentary Symposium registration, as well as a $1,000 honorarium, as a token of our appreciation and to help offset the costs of travel and preparation.

Please Complete This Brief Form to Submit Your Ideas by July 22!

Please Note: Submitting session and/or speaker ideas through this form is voluntary and does not guarantee selection, as content opportunities are extremely limited. All submissions are considered solely to inform and shape development of program content. The TKC team will review submissions in conjunction with the Symposium Planning Committee and applicants will be notified within two weeks of the posted submission deadline. By submitting, you acknowledge that there is no expectation of presentation and that the TKC reserves the right to decline or accept submissions without providing justification or feedback. Please do not call or email to check the speaker or selection status; we cannot guarantee response to the high volume of inquiries.
